Plastic (Polypropylene) Strapping

Plastic strapping is available in three main types: Polypropylene, polyester and cord

- Polypropylene is the least expensive, most versatile and has widest range of machines to apply it
- Polyester is like steel strap with the least elongation under tension
- Cord is normally used with buckles and applied by hand or with a tensioner

Regular Duty

Snap-On Regular-Duty

Open seals are the most commonly used type of seal.

They are designed for standard-duty strapping and are applied after strapping is tensioned on flat work surfaces.

Snap-On Heavy-Duty, Semi-Open

Semi-open seals snap on over strapping. They are designed for high-tensile strapping and tools to be applied either before or after tensioning on flat work surfaces.

Pusher-Type

Pusher-Type seals are specifically designed to work with pusher tools on round surfaces. Available for standard-duty and high-tensile strapping. These seals will also work with conventional tools.
